2018 Winnipeg Municipal Election Candidate Questionnaire

Dear Kevin Klein:

As a candidate in this year's municipal election, your opinion and position on issues important to our sector is highly valued. The MHBA asks that you please answer this brief questionnaire on the following four important topics:

1) Increasing Costs and Fees

According to Statistics Canada, residential construction costs in Winnipeg have risen over 14 per cent, more than double the national average, since the beginning of 2017. Between January 1st and March 31st, 2018, the cost of building or renovating a home in Winnipeg has shot up 7.3 per cent. To put that in comparison, the city with the next highest increase in construction costs during that time was Vancouver at 2.2 per cent.

During this same time, builders in Winnipeg saw increases on numerous permits and fees issued by the City of Winnipeg, including a 5% increase to the City's Impact Fee. These fee increases, while generating increased revenue for the City, are compounding other increasing construction costs and have negatively impacted the affordability of all housing – not just new homes - across Winnipeg.

What is your plan to stem increasing fees being charged to new and existing home owners in Winnipeg?

When it comes to housing and development, the key issue is fairness. The costs of servicing and supporting new residential development should be shared by the developer and the city. As the development attracts residents, a share of the cost also shifts to homeowners through municipal taxes. The critical issue is how do you continue to adhere to a policy of fair sharing of costs while also competing to attract investment dollars? At best, this is a moving target as competition for investment ebbs and flows. Same with demand for housing. But if fair-share is the guiding principle, the issues should be small and relatively short term (driven by the market at the moment).

2) Infill Strategy

The City of Winnipeg's implementation action plan for the Residential Infill Strategy has been developed and is currently being presented for public feedback. The MHBA supports an active and thriving infill housing market. More and more, the City of Winnipeg will rely on infill housing to sustain its long-term population growth.

What is your plan to help promote infill housing development and to create more certainty around investing in infill housing?

Infill housing is a positive thing and should be supported. Everybody loves to talk about cutting red tape and streamlining processes – and that is a good goal. But there is also a concern about balance. It's like turning a tap at the sink – too tight and nothing happens, too loose and you have a flood. Efficiency in government is a good thing, rubber stamp approval is not, and the right process sits between the extremes.

3) Development Approvals

Timing is a critically important component in securing private investment for major development projects that help provide Winnipeg with a consistent and reliable supply of housing. Winnipeg's development approval process can be an onerous one and added delays can potentially put investment at risk. Streamlining this process, which involves multiple City departments, would significantly help both Winnipeg's builders and land developers.

How would you support improving the development approval process?

I'm in favour of initiatives that will enhance the ability of our neighbourhood to maintain its character, while improving the ability of residents to enjoy proximal access to amenities, community centres and green space.

4) Our Winnipeg Review – Plan for Growth

Our Winnipeg is the City's road map and vision for future growth, planning and development for the next 25 years. It sets out the goals, policies and guidelines intended to direct all physical, social, environmental, and economic development in Winnipeg, now and into the future. A stable and predictable residential housing supply is critical to ensure that Winnipeg is able to grow in a sustainable way.

What are your thoughts on how Our Winnipeg can be a tool for residential growth?

I'm familiar with the "OurWinnipeg plan and Complete Communities directional plans -- they are well-thought out strategies for the future of Winnipeg. Planning establishes a framework for good, comprehensive and strategic growth, it allows the city to anticipate disasters and improve the quality of life for residents.

Winnipeg's housing policy and associated implementation plan also provide a framework for identifying targeted activities to maintain or improve the quality of housing stock, increase housing choices and visitability, and support the revitalization of community capacity.
